

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of testing a biological fluid for the presence of an infection, the method including the steps of introducing a sample of biological fluid and a reagent including light amplifying compound into a reaction chamber (18), the light amplifying compound reacting with a substance present only in an infected sample to emit light, and immediately measuring the intensity of any light emitted from the sample.